Did you have any problems creating an event?

8 responses

No, it worked fine.
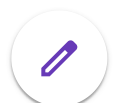

No it was straightforward

I used the help button

Nope

No.

I was not sure how to input the date.

Date box didn't need to take dates

I had to use the help me button, but then did not have to use this button again

Could this have been done better?

8 responses

No

I would say to make the option to create an event more accessible in the drop down menu.

No, I was satisfied

Did not know how to create an event before using the help button

No, the only thing that could have been done more extensively is the info the creator can provide, as well as validating input e.g only allowing dates in the dates section
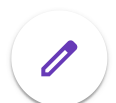

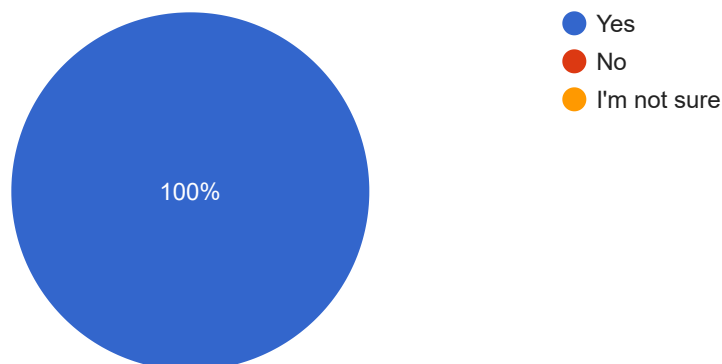

Use a different text box for dates to only pick specific dates.

Could have had date formatted correctly and once i am in event i own i cannot edit my event it was intuitive after the first time

Was the app fun to use? Would you use this app if it were fully developed?

8 responses

Yes and Yes. It's a really strong concept I believe. I could definitely use this if I was looking for more to play 5 a side soccer for example.

Definitely, really like the concept. Looking forward to seeing future progress.

Yes

Yes and yes

It was fun and I would definitely use it. Interacting with other people was great.

Possibly

Yes, it has a friendly interface

What features would you like to see in this app?

8 responses

Perhaps letting users connect their social media profiles on their bio as a way of verifying they're actually real people?

On the blue arrows perhaps have a timer which counts down to when the event is actually happening. For example red = The event is happening very soon. Green = It's a good while away. (You could colour code the arrows actually)

A reputation score for the host of the event, a bad host that doesn't like turn up, you can give him a bad score and not let him. Kinda like Amazon.
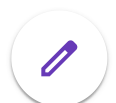

I'd like to see a feed of different events when I go into the app initially. Rather than the map being the focal point of the app's display.

Visit event from my events page

PMs

Being able to reaccess events I've joined without having to find them again on the map

Did you have a pleasant experience with the design? Please give some words that best describe why you have a positive/negative experience.

8 responses

Yes it's very accessible. Maybe you can give it a bit more colour to make it more standout I guess. Only cosmetic changes really..

Yeah it was enjoyable. I really like the concept. The app itself was quite straight forward.

Simple, colourful, intentional

Yes i did

It was a majority positive experience, howevever the map design was a bit strange due to some unusual features i.e being able to drag to and make events outside the main map or in different copies of countries, placenames being in native languages so being unable to read non-English.

Easy-to-use, clean, colourful.

Design was simplistic yet still had to ask where things were eg. leave button in events

How would you rate the design of the navigation bar?

8 responses
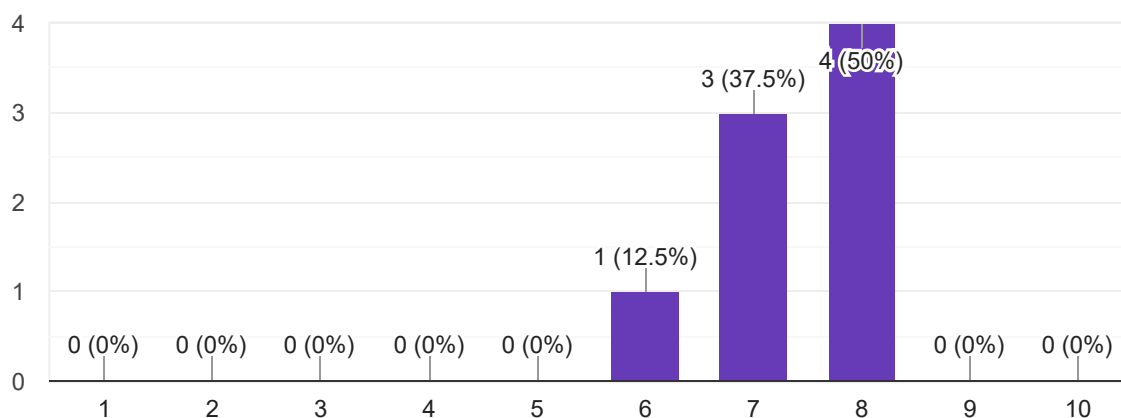

Why did you rate the navigation bar? as you did above? What would you change to improve the navigation element?

8 responses

Same as above, it's accessible and easy to use. Probably you can flower it up a little I guess.

It was solid

Had the right options

Maybe a couple more links and possibly more styling.

Make the help me clearly visible and remove the small horizontal scroll required for the page.

Also, you can vertically scroll and the nav bar disappears.

It had everything I needed. The help me button was handy as well as I wasn't sure how to use the app at first.

Event bar is larger than map so can only half see help me button, no need to have a

"A goal of this application is to be responsive". This means that it adapts well to all screen sizes, from desktop to mobile. Do you believe this goal was accomplished?

On the home page, do you believe the "help me" element in the nav-bar is helpful enough? Please explain why you like/dislike this implementation.

8 responses

Yes, I used it myself to help create an event.

I liked it. It was beneficial for figuring out the functionality of the app.

It was not intrusive but was there when I needed it

Yes, I liked it.

It is helpful as it gets across the main functionality.

Yes, definitely. I didn't notice it at first however. Maybe it should be on the left side.

Wasn't very helpful, should do a more step by step with images type layout

Yes, I did not know what to do without it

Do you believe that colour scheme of the profile page is appropriate? Does the "profile card" display appropriate information about the user?

8 responses

Yes

Yes and Yes.

Yeah it was all smooth, liked the design of the profile too.

There was good contrast in the colours. Yes.

The colour scheme was appropriate. It was a fun scheme to reflect the fun nature of the site. It does display appropriate information.

No problems with colour scheme

Yes, the bio worked well

On the profile page, was the event data easily readable and presented appropriately?

8 responses

Yes

Yes maybe make it a bit larger since it's a important detail or have it in bold I guess.

yes

The table of events could be split by event more clearly to make it easier to read but other than that, yes.

Yes, it was easily readable.

Data is nicely presented but cannot access event from there

yes, I liked how simple it was, not cluttered

On the event page, is the information about the event (title, date and location) well illustrated? (including the map). Please explain why you agree or disagree with this presentation.

8 responses

I agree with it, seems like all the information you'd need/want. Maybe a bit of detail about what the event is actually about (If there isn't one already)

Yes, everything was made clear.

Yes, I am able to see the location of event well

Yes it was

Yes. All the information is clearly laid out.

It was, however, the date could be seen in different formats. I think it should be one.

Information is nicely displayed in event

Yes, everything having its own box kept it clear

How would you rate the design of the "recent updates" element on the event page?

8 responses

The goal of the MY EVENTS page was to be a simple way to see your events. In your opinion, does it achieve this goal?

8 responses

How was your experience in leaving an event and deleting an event from the event settings drop down? Please explain why if not satisfied with design.

8 responses

Good.

Accessible, no problems

It worked well

Nice

Leaving an event works perfectly, as does deleting an event you've created. There is just an issue that when you try to delete an event you did not create, it redirect you to a raw JSON response page

It was very easy to do, however, I thought it was hard to find the buttons. I think it would be better if the button was on the page and not in the navbar.

Event dropdown should be different for if a user owns event or not. Delete button brings up file with db data
